Impact Analysis of HA Serum on Objective Index of Facial Skin

The 8th Medical Centre of Chinese PLA General Hospital Rong Wei

Objective:

To determine the effect of HA Serum on the objective indexes of facial skin.

Method:

Twenty women with healthy skin were selected. The skin tester of the German CK company was used to measure the change of the objective index of the facial skin before and after the application of the hyaluronic acid solution.

Results

The water content of the skin was significantly increased 30 minutes after using the HA Serum, whilst the high water concentration was maintained after 4 hours. The TEWL (water loss) index decreased significantly after the HA Serum using.

Table 1:

Transepidermal Water Loss (TEWL) after using HA Serum

Ages(YRS)	20-29	30-39	40-49	Over50
Before	≥ 8	8 ± 2	8 ± 2	8 ± 2
After 30 minutes	≤ 4	4 ± 1	4 ± 2	4 ± 2
After 4 hours	≤ 5	4 ± 1	4 ± 2	4 ± 2

Impact Analysis of HA Serum on Objective Index of Facial Skin

The 8th Medical Centre of Chinese PLA General Hospital Rong Wei

Table 2:

Facial skin moisture measurement after using HA Serum

Ages(YRS)	20-29	30-39	40-49	Over50
Before	≥ 45	35 ± 25	30 ± 25	< 30
After 30 minutes	≥ 90	70 ± 25	50 ± 30	< 85
After 4 hours	≥ 60	60 ± 10	60 ± 20	< 60

Analysis:

The outermost layer of facial skin is cuticle, which consists of 5~10 layers of dead corneocytes and parallels with the skin. They can act as a barrier and easily exfoliate when they are interlaced. The water content is only 20% of other cells.

After proper cleaning, apply 3-5 drops of HA Serum. After 30 minutes, the measurement showed that the water saturation rate is above 90%. After 4 hours, the skin water content decrease slightly, but the water saturation rate still retained over 60% on the surface of the skin.
